

SB 63 (Jackson) New Parent Leave Act Senator Jackson

SUMMARY

The New Parent Leave Act would provide up to 12 weeks of job-protected maternity and paternity leave for more California employees.

BACKGROUND

California falls behind the District of Columbia, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Oregon, Rhode Island, Washington and now New York in providing job-protected parental leave for small business employees. Under current law in California only those who work for an employer of 50 or more are eligible for job-protected parental leave. That leaves too many California workers without any job-protected family leave and many new parents struggling with an impossible choice between the well-being of their new child and their financial security.

Experts including the American Academy of Pediatrics recommend that healthy full-term infants not be enrolled in child care until they are at least 12 weeks old due to rapid developmental changes and the risk of quickly developing severe undetected illness.¹

PROBLEM

While California's worker-funded Paid Family Leave program provides employees with partial wage replacement while caring for a new child, many employees are unable to use this benefit they pay into for fear of losing their jobs. In fact, a 2011 field poll found that almost 2 out of 5 employees who were eligible to use PFL, but did not apply for the benefit, chose not to because they feared losing their job or other negative consequences at work.

¹ American Academy of Pediatrics, American Public Health Association, and National Resource Center for Health and Safety in and Safety Performance Standards, Third Edition (2011). Child Care and Early Education, Caring for Our Children: National Health

SOLUTION - NEW PARENT LEAVE

SB 63 (Jackson) ensures that more California workers who have been paying into the Paid Family Leave insurance program are able to use this benefit for parental leave without risk of losing their jobs. No one should have to choose between the wellbeing of their new child and their family's financial security.

Specifically, SB 63 would allow employees who work for a company with 20 or more employees, within a 75-mile radius, to take up to 12 weeks of job-protected leave to care for a new child.

This measure will benefit up to 2.7 million more Californians, but only affect 6 percent of the businesses.

While on leave the employer must maintain the employees' health insurance. To be eligible for the leave the employee must have worked for the company for at least a year and for at least half-time.

SPONSORS

California Employment Lawyers Association
Equal Rights Advocates
Legal Aid at Work

CONTACT

Lisa Gardiner
Office of Senator Hannah-Beth Jackson
(916) 651-4019
lisa.gardiner@sen.ca.gov